

Encouragement - Fulfillment

Small ensembles keep more advanced singers engaged, but also motivate beginners to want a better sound.

Because these small group members sit side-by-side with newcomers, in the main chorale, they bolster their confidence and help them realize the potential of good vocal production. This inviting atmosphere keeps people coming back for the pleasure of singing good music without intimidation or fear of mistakes.

We enjoy each other's voices and form a strong sound that is evident in our performances.